

USF CONNECT

USF CONNECT company, EMS, wins TBTF coolTECH Award

June 4, 2010:

For the second year in a row, a USF CONNECT company has won the Tampa Bay Technology Forum's coolTECH award. The coolTECH event highlights some of the coolest technologies in the Tampa Bay Area.

EMS, a start-up company located in the Tampa Bay Technology Incubator won this year's TBTF coolTECH award beating out nearly 50 other technologies. EMS provides product design, 3D scanning and rapid prototyping products and services for industries such as automotive, medical, consumer products, and aerospace.

Last year, TempTroll, LLC won the award for self-heating washcloths that were developed in partnership with USF faculty.

USF CONNECT delivers a wide range of business development services to technology businesses throughout the Tampa Bay region and State of Florida and provides a single point of contact for businesses seeking resources such as technology transfer, financing, marketing and management.

-USF CONNECT-

For more information, please contact:
Matt Lowell
Communications & Marketing Officer
USF CONNECT
813.974.3291
hmlowell@research.usf.edu